Retail Fish Prices

T is the duty of members of the Urban Council to devote careful attention to the question of the high prices of better grades of fish rotailed in the markets. This is no new problem; it has called for editorial occasions, but official concern has not manifested itself to any great degree. Government's preoccupation has been with developing the wholesale fish marketing scheme and the encouragement of co-operatives among the producers. Both projects have enjoyed aubstantial measure of success. But, as we have several times insisted, the benefits from the marketing operation have stopped short with the fishermen. Improved fishing facilities and methods, and the encouragement which the fishermen have received from the profitable marketing of their catches have resulted in an abundance Eden's Wedding of fish being available for the local market. It only required such a situation, argued Government, for retail prices to find a reasonable level. Unfortunately this has not happened. Those desire the better quality fish have still to pay dis-

Alexandria, Aug. 13. Unofficial reports said ten workers and two policemen were killed and 200 people were injured in today's riots in the Alexandria area.

The workers set fire to a petrol station and cotton stores and smashed and set fire to most of the 40,000 spindles and automatic looms.

They also blocked the road to Alexandria to prevent fire brigades reaching Kafr el Dawar.

The demonstrators were reported to have fired on army units rushed to the scene. Strong mechanised units of the Egyptian army tonight occupied the riot-torn fire-gutted industrial area of Kafr el Dawar after 24 hours of armed clashes between

Brewing Industry In Britain Enters Boom Period

London, Aug. 13. Britain's brewing industry is entering what looks like being a boom period — and like most booms in industry there is a cause and effect. In this case, the cause is the increased potency of this year's beer. The effect is that Britons are so pleased to have stronger beer that they are drinking more of it. To get an overall picture of Britain's beer-drinking habits of today compared with a few years ago, it is necessary to go back to the last year before the war.

Two hours later, Miss Turner's trunks were unpacked. Her tickets were enncelled. The Jaquar was back in the garage. The trip was off.

Lana had turned her back on pleasure to go to work. It was not; as all . Hollywood will recall, like the Lana of old. The trip to Europe was to have been part of the four-month vacation that Lana's contract guarantees her each year. "Then. I read Tribute tor a Bad Man,' " she recalled. " 'Lana,' I said, stop being a dope. This is your meat!"

Shorter: Vacation

So she remained at work and substituted three weeks at Palm Springs, with swimming, cycling, tennis and relaxation in the desert sun, for the projected trip to Europe.

"I made sure I was in condition for my new picture," she said. The role should not be too taxing a one. Lana portrays a glamorous film star.

Except for this new-found willingness to work, there's not much difference between the "new" Lana and the old.

She has slimmed down a bit, It's true. None of the strategic spots suffered. She is a wellrounded 113 pounds, standing five feet three. She still loves fine clothes and sparkles with jewels at formal premieres. She also still hates to cook and leaves such drudgery in the hands of her expert chef.

Unable To Complete Its Mission

New York, Aug. 13.

The United Nations Commission to investigate conditions for the holding of free elections in Germany has reported to the Secretary-General that it was unable to complete its task,

In its second report the Commission attributed this to the "unwillingness" of the Soviet Union and the German authorities in the Soviet Zone of Germany to co-operate.

The Commission has adjourned indefinitely. It was set up by the General Assembly to investigate and prepare conditions for a nation-wide plebiscite.

The report was signed by the representatives of the four tiations on the Commission.

Brazil, Iceland, the Netherlands and Pakistan.

It said that during the three months the Commission find had to remain in Geneva at no little sacrifice to the member governments concerned; it had become increasingly evident that Soviet and East. German unwillingness to co-operate, displayed at the sixin session of the General Assembly, re-that the Government of the U.S.S.R., anxious as it was for a quick and just solution to the derman question, would ultifaith in a body that had been set up by an overwhelming majority of its colleagues in the United Nations," it said.

The Commission concluded its report. by saying it could see little prospect of its bolnk ablo to secure co-operation from the Boviet Zone authorities in the near future.—Reuler

And there is another reason for this high-powered interest in what today is nothing more than a sandy bay with slightly hilly background: it would provide another port for the handling of the vital transit cargoes if in another war the Suez Canal were put out of Durban is already congested: Capetown, If the Suez Canal were closed, would be unable to handle without serious delays the vastly increased shipping.

Sordwinn Bay, if developed in peacetime, would reduce the strain on the now overloaded Natal rail system.

DIFFICULT PROBLEM

The possibilities of Sordwana were surveyed by sea last November. In 1922 it was visited by Sir George Buchanan, consulting engineer, who saw in it a future port. With Sir George at the time, was Gen.

When Dr Malan flies over the area he will also examine the route proposed for a rail line connecting Pongola with Candover with the object of helping the sugar growers in the Pongola

If a harbour is established at Sordwana the trade of the Portugese port of Lourenco Marques l is likely to be affected.

This could create a difficult problem, for the Mozambique authorities might then be forced to review the availability of its African labour for the Transvaal and Orange Free State gold mines.-London Express Service

THE fittings in the room were not much write home above, and as for the room-service .

For the nth time, Clive pressed the bell-push. For the nth time he mustered the ragged remnants of his patience to awalt an answer to his ringing

"Hey," Clive cried into the corridor "HEY, HEY, THERE." No one came.

Clive turned his attention to the bell-push again. He had first regarded the metal-button as a friend; then had come to think of it as an enemy. Now he looked upon it as a doctor might a patient. Perhaps there was something wrong with it some simple complaint be could correct

AH, there was something A wrong. The metal plate round the button was loose. Clive loosened it a little more. He had done some drinking during the evening; and now there was upon him a rosy, alcoholic glow. He was in an experimental, a pioneering, frame of mind.

Presently the metal plate came away in his hand. He examined it for a moment, set it down on the floor and turned his attention to the rest of the apparatus, the bell-push itself. But the bell-push had disappeared. There was left just was moving through a ration a hole in the wall. The bell-system into the hands of the push and the wire that went Indian people. He also dewith it had slipped out of sight, out of reach, down the hole in the wall.

Petulantly, Clive picked up the metal plate and threw it into the corridor, "HEY, THERE," he called.

iast someone came. A policeman, who stopped outside the door of Clive's cell picked up the metal plate that Clive had thrown through the grille, and said: "Here, what's all this going on?

Clive told him what he thought of cell-service in this police-station. "I've been trying to get someone for hours," he sold. "I've been ringing and shouting. I wanted someone to phone my wife and tell her I'd not be home. I wanted a glass of water ..."

The policeman by now had come into the cell. He examined the hole in the wall. "Ho," he said, "been damaging property, have you?" "Rubbish," Clive said, "it was broken already." "Wilful damage," the police-

QURE enough, Clive was chargeti at Great Mariborough Street later on in the morning, first with being drunk and disorderly, and secondly, to doing £3 13s, worth of wilful damage to the bell-push. To the first he pleaded guilty, to the second he did not, so the whole story had to be told to Mr Paul Bennett, VC, the magistrate.

"I know costs are rising," Mr Bennett said, "but £3 13s seems a lot of money for mending a bell-push."

"That was the estimate given us this morning" the policeman

"But the things simply unscrowed," said Clive, from the dock, "I could go back and perew it up again myself."

THE magistrate turned to the policeman. "Tell me about the drunk and disorderly charge," he sald. '.

Grain Not Being Diverted To China

Washington, Aug. 13. A State Department offi cial, in a letter made public today, strenuously denied charges that part of the American grain being shipto India had been to Communist diverted Jack McFall, assistant to the Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, wrote to - Senator Harry Cain of Washington that the American Government checked the matter thoroughly and the charges were utterly unfounded.

Senator Cain inserted the letter in the Congressional Record, official journal of legislators. The allegation was made in the publication Marine Digest published in Seattle. The Senator had called it to the attention of the State Department. Mr McFall wrote: "The allegation contained in the editorial is a most serious one in that it impugns the good faith of the government of India on one hand and suggests that the intent of the government and people of the United States is being disregarded on the other.

"Information available indicates that no grain, whether imported from the United States produced domestically, has been shipped from India to China during the past two years."

He said "periodic and careful reports" of American officials revealed that American grain scribed the Indian rationing system as "not only the largest but one of the most efficient in the world".

Noting that the editorial asserted that grain was going from India to Red China over the old Burma Road, Mr McFall said this was impossible because of the condition of the abandoned highway. He added that China shipped food grains to India in 1951 instead of the reverse.-United Press.

Washington, Aug. 13. A self-styled former Communist, who is now an un-American activities agent, alleged in sworn evidence that Communists planned to infiltrate the boy scout movement; Senate investigators disclosed today.

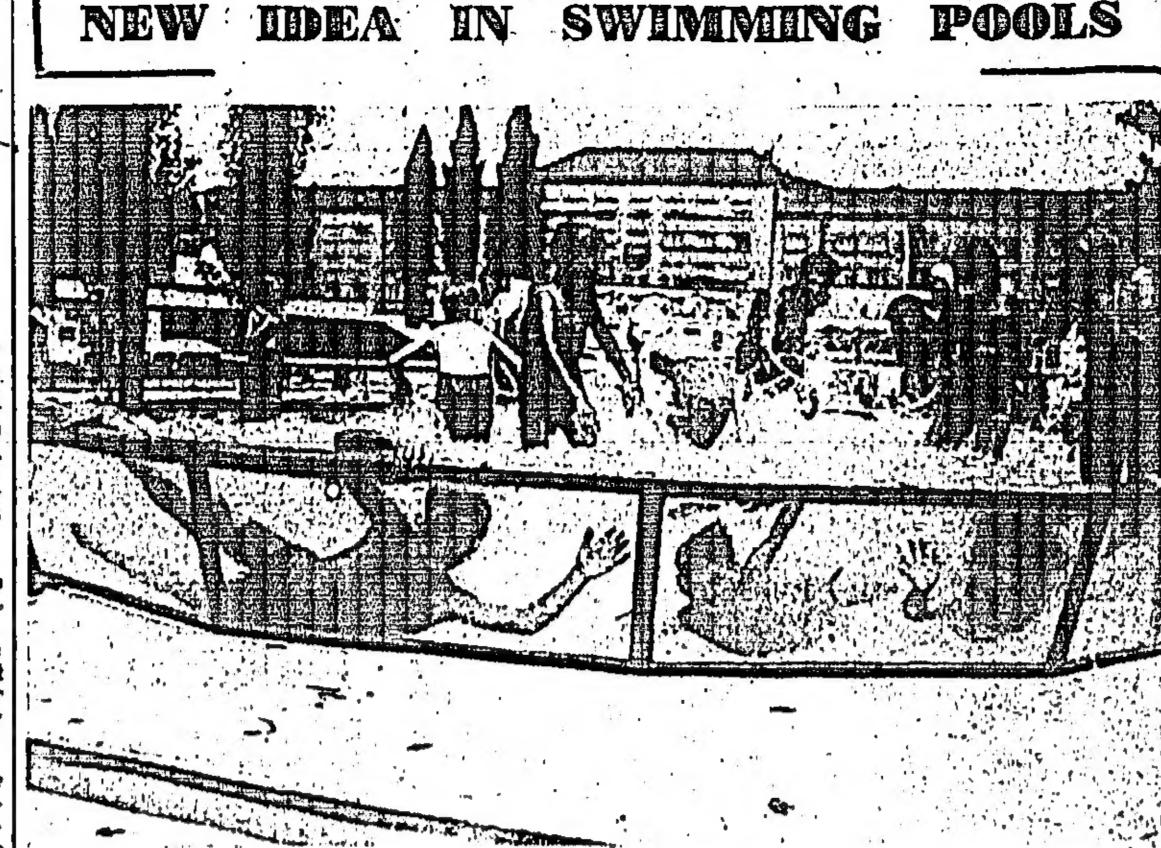

The investigators made public evidence given by Mr Harvey M. Matusow, of Dayton, Ohio, agent of the Ohio Commission Un-American Activities, to Security Subcommittee.

Mr Matusow said the Communists, after a futile effort in the 1930's to undermine the scout movement, switched to the infiltration plan, under which they hoped to mix secret Communist agents among the scouts and feed them "Communism with sugar coat-

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), the Subcommittee chairman, said in a prepared statement released with the report: "I can conceive few greater crimes."

Mr Matusow cited the example of Don West, whom he de-

The diagonal is 149 yards; let the other sides of the triangle be in yards and n yards.

Then m + 30 = n + 119, i.e., m = n + 89.

Bo (149 + n) (149 - n) = (n + 89) (n + 89), i.e., (n + 140)
